New Lenox Is Host to The Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce Wednesday Evening

New Lenox was host to the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce Wednesday evening. The meeting, the first to be held in 1932 of this organization, was held in the M. E. church. A cafeteria supper was served by the Ladies Aid in the church parlors.

At the close of the supper, the meeting was held in the church auditorium, with Dr. W. R. Schussler of Orland Park, president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce presiding.

The meeting was opened with a solo by Mrs. Pecke of New Lenox. The continuation and completion of the Southwest Highway from Cook County, thru New Lenox township on south to Saunemin was the chief topic under discussion.

Dr. Schussler stated that as far as Cook County is concerned the Southwest highway will be completed up to the Wolf road north of Mokena by this fall. He said the Cook County Commissioners had assured him that the route as surveyed from Orland south to Alpine has been accepted by the Cook County board and that Ray Smith, the county right of way man will be ready to negotiate for the needed right of way by next week and that a contract for the construction of the final stretch of this highway in Cook County will be let.

Dr. Schussler pointed out that both Robert Kingery, of the Chicago Regional planning Commission and Major George Quinlan, Cook County Supt., of Highways have been opposing the construction of the Southwest highway in Cook County but that at last both have been "licked" in this matter as the County Board is going ahead with the project.

Dr. Schussler rapped the crooked officials who retard progress and who only look out for their own personal interests.

Mayor Frank E. Harnew of Oak Lawn gave an interesting summary of the fight his section has been waging for 18 years to get the Southwest highway. He complimented the ladies for their interest in politics and that they often had a keener insight into public matters than the men have.

Fred Francis, Supervisor of New Lenox township declared that Will County had approved the building of the Southwest highway thru Will County and that it was up to the legislators to see that the road was built by the state. He pointed out that 7100 miles of road have already been suggested to be placed on the state's secondary road program map. He suggested that the chair appoint two representatives from Will County to appear before the Future Roads Commission at their meeting in Springfield June 23rd in the interests of the Southwest Highway thru Will County. Dr. Schussler appointed Rep. Michael Hennebray of Wilmington and Eugene Hoerrmann of Manhattan.

Rep. Frank Foster of Harvey in whose district in Cook County the Southwest Highway is located, declared that Cook County is paying the entire construction cost of the highway in that county and pointed out that 15 per cent of the gas tax money intended for hard road construction is being used for unemployment relief. He pledged his support to have the Southwest highway completed by the state.

Rep. John Walker of Joliet paid especial attention to the fact that the legislature has appropriated twenty million dollars from the gas tax and motor vehicle license fund for unemployment relief in Cook County and other parts of the state and urged all the voters to vote in favor of the bond issue to be submitted at the November election for the repayment of the money advanced, and that it will not mean any increase in taxes as the motor revenues will take care of that, but he warned that if the bond issue is defeated it will mean an increase of the state tax from the present rate of 39 cents to 74 cents.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove who is seeking re-election to the General Assembly declared that politicians in general are paying much attention to the demands of the public for economy in tax matters and stated that she favored the construction of the Southwest highway out of the gas tax fund and she further pointed out that New Lenox should be in harmony on the location of the Southwest highway thru the township as she had received a letter from a woman taxpayer protesting the route following the Wabash.

Rep. M. Hennebray of Wilmington also stated he had received a similar communication and also urged for a definite understanding of location. He also urged the passage of the bond issue referred to by Rep. Walker. Rep. Hennebray said that if re-elected he will heartily support the Southwest highway in the legislature and referred to this highway as the missing link in the transportation system of Illinois.

The next meeting of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce will be held in Campus in July. The meeting night has been changed from the second Wednesday to the second Thursday.

Senator Richard J. Barr was unable to attend due to illness but advised he would support the highway measure. Senator Arthur Huebsch of Cook County was also unable to attend but said he was 100 per cent for the Southwest highway.

The following towns were represented:

The regular village board meeting was held at Frankfort Monday night. Mr. Stevens and Mr. Richards of the Public Service Company were at the meeting regarding the franchise of the company in Frankfort which has expired and which will be renewed at the next meeting.

There will be an addition added owing to lights that have been installed.

The license committee was again instructed to collect fees from soft drink parlors, dog and water taxes. The dog license rates have been reduced $1 from the old rate. They are now $2 and $1 instead of $3 and $2 as formerly charged.

Mokena Flower Garden Wins Praise

The past week a travelling horticulturist visited Mokena and while travelling down the Wolf road his interest was aroused when he saw the beautiful floral plot on the estate of Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich and his impressions are well summed up in his comment which was as follows:

"On looking over the various garden plots, I find one more out standing than others, in fact so beautiful it stands alone."

"Mrs. A. C. Scheiblich, a very charming young gardener of Mokena has the ideal garden I have a reference too. One is held spell-bound as he views the wonderful arrangement of bushes, trees, flowers of all hues, the rock gardens, the fish pool, the rock rest, the cute bird houses, all surrounded with beautiful back grounds of shrubbery and grass that has the appearance of a velvet carpet."

"The view so pleases the eye that one is almost tempted to trespass and occupy the inviting seats distributed throughout the grounds."

"Mokena can be proud of a resident gifted with natural instinct in planning and designing a garden success, so evenly balanced, a little here, a little there, not too much here, not too much there."

"Others can benefit by viewing and studying this garden in planning garden sites."

TINLEY MAN KILLED BY R. I. FAST LIMITED

Peter Van Swal, aged 23 years, was instantly killed Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when his automobile was hit on a private crossing over the Rock Island railroad in front of the Vogt farm east of Tinley Park by the Rocky Mountain limited east bound.

Another car occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sanders was standing on the north side of the crossing waiting for the flyer to pass when Mr. Van Swal drove out of the farm yard. They waved to him to stop, but he did not understand their signals and drove on the crossing almost in front of the train. The front part of the car had cleared but the cylinder of the locomotive hit the rear end of the car swinging it into the side of the engine, the top of the car being sheared off. The terrific impact hurled the body of Mr. Van Swal thru the roof of the car. The train was stopped as quickly as possible but when the train crew and the witnesses to the tragedy reached Mr. Van Swal's body they found it lifeless. A brother of the victim also witnessed the accident.

The body was removed to the Funk & Adler undertaking rooms in Oak Forest where the inquest was held Tuesday morning.

Mr. Van Swal is survived by his bride of six months, his father, seven brothers and many other friends and relatives.

Funeral services were held Thursday from the Holland church at Roseland with burial in the Holland cemetery.

TINLEY PARK TRIANGLE TALKIES

Hello folks! It has been quite a long time since this has appeared, but never-the-less things have been happening around here. For instance one of our members has decided to be with us again. Did you learn any thing in college, Stan? (Educational or otherwise.)

We are more than pleased to have Dorothy home with us again, but everybody will be disappointed when they hear that "Dottie" will soon leave us. Won't we girls and fellows too.

Summer is almost here and so is the club's annual golf tournament which will soon take place. This tournament is open to all members. There will be a double tournament in late June or July to be followed by the individual match.

The individual tournament will be highly interesting this year as Mr. Mesenbrink has been victorious in 1930 and '31. If he wins this year, he is entitled to retain the beautiful trophy which will be presented to the person winning this cup for three succeeding years. Here's luck to you "Wally", you will probably need it if advance reports are true.

For the first time in years our permanent vice-president, the Hon. Mr. Meyer took charge of a meeting. That just goes to show you that the old slogan, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again" came true in vice-president Meyer's case.

One of our members has turned into a business man. He is engaged in the legitimate profession of hotdog slinger and soda dispenser. Here's luck to you, Mick.

Orland Community Center Foundation Dedicated Sunday

One of the most unique and outstanding community enterprises in northern Illinois is the Community Center Foundation being established on the Ernest Warner farm a short distance northeast of Orland Park on the Southwest highway. Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Orland Park M. E. church has been vitally interested in the project for many years and has worked up an organization known as the Community Center Foundation and this organization has been incorporated and a charter has been issued to them. Mr. Warner has been intensely interested in the organization and has donated ten acres of land which at one time he could have sold for $10,000. The Foundation was dedicated last Sunday afternoon at four o'clock with a befitting service.

Rev. Mr. Sanders was the chairman of the dedicatory program.

The program was opened with a prayer by Rev. Frank Coates of the Lemont M. E. church. Mr. Warner then presented the deed for the 10 acres and the charter. Mr. Louis J. McCauley, one of the trustees from Worth accepted the same on behalf of the Foundation.

Rev. Mr. Coates made some interesting remarks followed by the key note address by Rev. Guy Jones of Worth. Another interesting address, touching on the uniqueness of the project was made by Glenn Harding, Executive Secretary of Alpha Delta Phi of Chicago. Miss Clarice Mahaffay of Palos, the secretary read the charter, constitution and by laws of the organization. Miss Pearl Cooper of Orland, the treasurer, read a financial report.

The program closed with group singing. This was followed by an informal reception and a pot luck supper was served in the camp building.

The wonderfully generous gift of Mr. Warner which has made the Community Center Foundation possible is mightily appreciated by its promoters who will endeavor to meet this generous and unselfish gift with equally good and unselfish work.

One of the big objects of the new organization is the education of the youth for Christian Citizenship.

A more detailed outline of the plans and purposes of the Foundation will be published next week.

Change Made In Orland School Faculty

A change in the faculty of the Orland Park public school will be made for the coming school year.

Mr. R. I. White, principal and Mr. Bechtloff, the latter being the head of the manual training department, have both been offered positions of added responsibility and an increase in salary. Mr. White has been here a year and has established an excellent record as an instructor and has made many warm friends in the student body and among the parents, and it is with a sense of keen regret that they see him leave the Orland school.

Mr. Bechtloff who has been here two years has been of great value to the Orland school. The following tribute paid to Mr. Bechtloff by Mr. White, the principal, thoroughly covers the sentiment regarding Mr. Bechtloff's school work here:

"Mr. Bechtloff has proved of inestimable value to the school. He has left his stamp in many activities and in the organization of the school. He has been of extraordinary good influence on the student body. It is mainly through his efforts that the safety patrol has been brought into being; that the manual training department has been developed to the point where it has called forth special recognition from the state department of education; that the playground conduct of the elementary pupils has reached a point not before attained; and that other activities have been sponsored. While the school is sorry to see him leave, yet it wishes him every possible success in his new position and congratulates him on his attainment."

The following teachers in the Orland Park school have been re-engaged for another term: Miss Ersal Kettering, Miss Lucile Schmaderke and Mrs. Milton E. Smith.

TINLEY STORES OPEN ON WEDNESDAY EVENINGS

Mrs. L. G. Bruder, president of the Mokena Garden Club and Mrs. Wm. Semmler attended the Flower Festival last Friday afternoon given by the Joliet Garden and Floral Club on the estate of A. J. Olhaver in Joliet. It was truly a lovely affair, the beautiful grounds, with rock gardens, spacious lawns, pergolas, evergreen groupings, the Sugar creek with its scenic bridge and island and the cabin on the hill, together with the flower exhibits, made one feel somewhat enchanted.

The Joliet High School symphony orchestra under the direction of Hiram Converse played under the natural canopy of trees, was very pleasing to listen to. Representatives were present from Morris, Gardner, Downers Grove, Manhattan, Kankakee, LaGrange, Chicago, Western Springs, Morgan Park, Chicago Heights, Tinley Park, Lockport, Peotone, Plainfield and Mokena.

Mokena Girl A Pretty June Bride

A simple but pretty home wedding was solemnized last Saturday afternoon June 4th at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Cappel east of Mokena when their oldest daughter, Myrtle was united in marriage with Mr. Harold Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer L. Cooper also of Mokena.

The home was prettily decorated in green and yellow crepe paper streamers and flowers.

Promptly at four o'clock, the pastor of the St. John Evangelical church, the Rev. Theodore Lapp took his place in the living room where he was met by the groom and his best man, Darwin Cooper, a cousin of the groom. Little Eleanor Hostert, cousin of the groom followed, dressed in white and carrying a basket of sweet peas. The bride now approached with her sister Mildred as bride's maid, who was gownned in peach chiffon and carried an arm bouquet of tea roses. The bride was lovely in a rose beige chiffon gown with silver slippers to match and carried an arm bouquet of tea roses.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. A five course dinner was served in the dining room to 20 guests, being the immediate members of the two families. A gorgeous wedding cake with a miniature bride and groom with candles on either side graced the center of the table. The guests were seated with place cards in the shape of a basket of flowers.

Mrs. Raymond Warning of Frankfort and Mrs. Barney Hostert of Mokena served at the table, and Mrs. Poulsen catered.

Mr. and Mrs. Cooper left the same evening by motor for a honeymoon trip to the Dells of Wisconsin, Eagle River and other points of interest in that state. Upon their return they will be at home to their friends in the Martie dwelling on Third Street.

The wedding gifts were useful and beautiful.

Mr. Cooper is associated with his father in the garage business in Mokena. Mrs. Cooper was formerly employed in the office of the Western Bureau Insurance Exchange in Chicago. Both young people are well known and highly respected citizens of the community.

On Saturday afternoon, May 28th the young ladies associated with Mrs. Cooper in the insurance office, tendered her a dinner in the Steven's Hotel in Chicago. She was presented with many pretty gifts.

Start Them Early

Nothing will help instill thrift into your youngsters more than to start them out with bank accounts of their own.

You will have to make the deposits, at first—but get them interested!

Then as soon as they are old enough to earn a little money of their own, encourage them to put a part of it in their savings accounts.

When they grow up they will appreciate the value of money and realize the helpful influence of a bank book.

FRANKFORT ALUMNAE HOLDS 25th ANNUAL BANQUET; 150 ATTEND

The 25th annual banquet of the Frankfort Public school alumnae was held Monday evening in the St. Peter Evangelical church parlors. Dinner was served to 150 guests and was followed by an interesting program. Miss Eva Jean Pfaff, president of the alumnae gave the welcoming address and Miss Marjorie Knight the president of the class of 1932 gave the response. Former principals were invited, but only two, Mr. J. Clark and Mr. Knight were able to attend. Each gave a short talk as did the present principal, Mr. Alvin Hill. Mrs. Viola Sayers, former teacher and mother of a graduate, was also asked to speak.

MOKENA CHILDREN USE STREET FOR PLAYGROUND

A group of children have conceived the idea of using the Front street in Mokena for a playground, endangering not only their lives, but that of the motorists as well.

These youngsters assume a defiant attitude when an auto approaches and stand as close to the passing cars as possible. Some of the children equate near the center of the street and refuse to budge when a car approaches.

If any of these children should happen to be hit, what a hue and cry the parents would raise against the unlucky motorist. It is time that the parents stopped being careless and indifferent and keep their children off the street before a serious accident occurs. It is too bad that parents are so indifferent to the danger (continued on back page)

SYNOPSIS

Exhausted, ragged, and starving, a boy of about sixteen is found in the woods by a camping party. He has fled from his brutal father, Bat Morryson. Bat comes after him, but his new friends conceal him. Fed and in clean clothes, the boy, who gives his name as Shad (Sheridan), is sent on his way to Canton, with a letter to Colonel Blake. The colonel, his wife, and their young daughter Ruth, are impressed by the boy's manner. The colonel secures him a situation in the village of Amity Dam. He becomes friendly with a youth of his age, "Bony," and Bumpy Brown, tinker, considered by the straitlaced people of Amity Dam as a drunkard because of his periodic lapses from strict sobriety. Bat Morryson comes to Amity Dam to take his son back to his own dissolute life.

CHAPTER III

A Day at the Fun Shop.

From the rear room of the store Shad ran downstairs to the cellar and out of its open hatchway. He went directly to the Smithers' house. The merchant, now familiar with the history of Shad, was at home. Learning the truth, he said to the boy:

"You disappear until the colonel comes. I'll telephone him. I don't want to know where you are."

He hurried to the store. Shad went to the loft in the barn and spread a blanket on the haymow and lay down.

Mr. Smithers found the Cyclopean Bat swearing mad. Shad's father and the constable were in the store. The latter introduced Mr. Smithers.

"Where is that boy?" Bat asked. "I don't know."

"You're a d-d liar."

"I don't allow swearing in this store," said Mr. Smithers in that gentle tone which he used in selling ribbons to a lady. "If you'll sit down, I'll consult my attorney on the telephone and ask him what ought to be done."

He called Colonel Blake, who said, "Tell the man that I'll meet him at your store tomorrow at eleven o'clock."

The interview next morning was very brief.

"Morryson, I know all about you," said the colonel. "You ought to be in jail. I shall see that you are put there and tried for brutality to your children if you do not get out of this country today and stay out of it. Don't irritate me by talk or tarrying. I want you to start now."

Bat started. He had heard of the district attorney of St. Lawrence county, the terror of all the lawbreakers of the north country. He would make no words with him. The colonel set out for his home.

At last Shad was free. He celebrated his emancipation with a social adventure. It marks the beginning of the second act of this drama of country life. He and Bony went down to Brown's cove on the river for a visit with Bumpy Brown.

"It'll be Sunday tomorrow—lord, how I dread it!" said Bony. "The bells an' the yells an' the stillness an' the sleepiness an' helpin' Miss Spellow pick flowers an' then the walk in the cemetery to the graves of her cruel ancestors. Let's break away an' pike off to Bumpy Brown's. I'll paddle down today an' tell him we're comin'."

Now, Mrs. Smithers was a worker in the church. Shad had sat in the Smithers pew every Sunday with her and her husband. His compliance with their wishes had pleased them. The long prayers and sermons, the singing and inexpressible shouting had generally given him a pain in the head. Shad's sense of rectitude was being slowly undermined by this ordeal. Soon he would be willing to lie to escape it.

That Sunday morning he told Mrs. Smithers that he was going for a walk to see the country and to think up things to write in a letter. He would not come home for dinner.

"I'll pray for you," said the good woman.

At the store he met Bony.

"I suppose that Sister Smithers wanted you to go to the Sob Works?" said Bony.

"The Sob Works?"

"The meetin' house," Bony explained.

Always he called it "The Sob Works."

"She's good to me," said Shad, remembering her kindness.

"Well, you're good to them. You do all their dirty work for 'em."

They walked down the river road together. "What does Bumpy Brown do?" Shad asked.

"Kind of a tinker—mends umbrellas an' clocks an' tin pans an' 'most anything. He's got a funny bird that talks."

By and by they left the road and took a well-trod path that led into a thicket of evergreens. Beyond this on the high bank of the river was the curious little home of old Bumpy Brown. It was built of small logs stranded in his cove when the high water of the spring went down. A few shapely cedar trees stood around it. Bumpy used to say of his acre on the river shore that it was "God's Fair Ground." A man of imagination going to the lonely little house on a clear June morning would have called it the capital of Fairyland and chiefly because of the many voices in the reedy marsh and the woods and the flower-strewn grasses near it.

Bumpy was wont to call the birds his chickens. He fed them with crumbs from his table.

With his own hands he had completed the picturesque little house. It was snuggled into the river bank. Its curving roof had a wide overhang. Its windows were almost flush with the ground toward the trail. Its floor was somewhat below the level of the ground on three sides. Its south side toward the river had a door and two windows, opening on a flat rock ledge. Beyond them was a fine stretch of still water. The roof was partly covered with overlapping cedar strips from an abandoned launch, a patch of shingles, a patch of rusty tin, and a patch of tar paper.

The windows and doors differed in shape and size. They had come from abandoned mills and houses. The snug and shapely structure, about sixteen feet square, gave one the impression that it had grown out of the ground. Though delightful in form, it was a thing of shreds and patches.

Bumpy Brown was cutting wood back of the house.

"Hello, Bony!" he shouted. "I'm gettin' ready to start up the fun works."

"It's a sight to see you workin'," said Bony.

"Say, by Jeez! When I've swung an ax a while I git a grudge ag'in' Adam fer eatin' that apple."

Bony introduced his young friend.

"Say, boys, what be you expectin'?"

The boys did not quite understand his query and were silent.

"We'll have a good visit an' a reg'lar Christmas dinner. Come down to the spring a minute. I want to show ye suthin' calculated to improve the condition o' the poor."

They descended from the high ground to a wooded ravine. A covered dishpan was sunk in its cold spring. It held a small dressed turkey.

"My friend Muggins brought that to me, knowin' I expected company," Bumpy explained. "It makes him feel bad to see young turkeys sleepin' out o' doors, in a tree, these frosty nights. They ain't comf'able. He puts 'em out o' their misery."

The old man laughed as he added: "There ain't a-goin' to be no sufferin' here if I can help it."

He walked with a knotty crooked stick cut in the woods. His artificial leg squeaked at every step. He limped a little but he could travel at a good pace. As they entered the house a strange gentle voice called out:

"Hello, pard! Are you happy?"

"Yes, Dick," Bumpy answered.

"Praise the Lord!" the voice exclaimed.

It came from a yellow-headed parrot in a cage that rested among some potted ferns on a windowsill. The floor was well swept. The whole interior of the little house was noticeably clean. A crayon portrait of a plain-looking woman hung on the wall.

"That's her—my wife," said the old man proudly as he stood looking at the portrait. "Just as nat'ral as can be—made from a photygraft. Alwus lookin' at me—the best woman that ever lived. Died ten year ago, this comin' fall—September seventeenth, at four ten in the mornin' exactly."

He wiped his eyes with a faded bandanna handkerchief and went to the woodbox. He began to whittle kindlings for the stove. He stopped and looked up at the boys and added: "I said she died but she's still here—alwus speaks to me when I come home an' we talk things over same as we used to."

He hurried out-of-doors.

"Always hustles around like that after he's spoke his piece about her," said Bony with a smile.

Bumpy returned with an armful of wood. He turned to Bony and said:

"Say, listen to me. Ol' Bumpy Brown has quit drinkin'. No more whisky fer him—not never no more! By Jeez! I mean it. The las' time I come near breakin' my good leg an' then my wife an' I had a talk about it. She argued it out plain. An' then I had a dream an' I heard her voice. She screamed to me an' she said: 'Look out, Bill, look out!' I was scairt."

Bumpy shook his forefinger at Bony with this solemn declaration:

"If you ever see me drunk ag'in', you can take off my wooden leg an' split it up fer kindlin's. I guess the d-n't thing would burn well."

The parrot broke into laughter and then said in a gentle voice. "God is love."

"My wife taught him that," said Bumpy. "He's good comp'ny. Dear me, Suz! Guess I'd 'a' caved in long ago without him."

Daughter of Herodias Not Mentioned by Name

Nowhere in the Bible does it say that Salome was the name of the daughter of Herodias, who, instructed by her mother, requested of Herod and received the head of John the Baptist in a charger as the reward of her dancing. The Scriptural accounts of this incident do not give the name of the daughter of Herodias, referring to her simply as the damsel. From the Jewish historian Josephus we learn that Herodias had a daughter named Salome by her first husband, who was Herod's brother Philip. This Salome first married her first cousin and step-brother, Herod Philip, tetrarch of Iturea, and afterward became the wife of Aristobulus, king of Chalcis. It is merely a conjecture that she was the damsel who asked for the head of John the Baptist. The Salome mentioned in connection with the crucifixion was an entirely different woman.—Pathfinder Magazine.

It would seem that the bird performed an important service in that little home. It was like the spirit of the dead.

"Nobody ever see you drinkin'," said Bony. "I supposed you got drunk thinkin' o' Cy Doolittle an' the scenery."

"Well, it's all over, an' I just as soon tell you boys suthin' if you'll keep it a secret. It's very private."

The boys indicated their respect for his confidence with unusual emphasis. Bumpy winked and sat down and pulled up his right trousers leg to the knee, exposing most of his wooden member. On one side was a little shelf with a hole in it and a cork in the hole.

"Ye see, all I had to do was buy a bottle o' whisky an' fill up my leg with it. That o' leg holds enough to see snakes with. When I wanted a drink I'd lift my pants leg an' stick a straw in the hole an' shift a part o' the load a little higher up. I call it my happy New Year leg."

The boys laughed.

"Yes, sir, my ol' leg an' me is goin' to behave."

He took down a fiddle hanging on the wall and said: "Here's the main shaft o' the fun works."

He tuned its strings and played "Money Musk" and "The Sailor's Hornpipe." The bird sang joyously and Bony danced a jig as Bumpy played. He hung up the fiddle and said to Bony:

"If you'll run down an' bring up that turkey an' the butter, I'll start the doin's."

The boy ran and fetched them.

The bird indulged in a weird chortle. Bumpy smiled and said:

"Well, Dick, you've never learnt how to make a fool o' yerself as I have. I've got a maggot in my brain."

Dick whistled a bar of the old bugle call for assembly.

Bumpy picked up a broom, shouldered it and marched briskly across the room as if obeying the call. Returning to his task he said:

"We have great times—that bird an' me. We visit together an' he sings purty. When I go a-tinkerin' I take him with me, carry him on a stick behind me, fastened to my pack. He amuses the family while I work. Everybody loves him."

Bumpy had a jolly way of bullying the boys.

"Go an' wash yer hands an' comb yer hair," he said. "By Jeez! Anybody would think that you was settin' down with common folks to a plain dinner. If any o' my rich friends should come I want ye to look right."

Bony had a nervous habit of winking and wrinkling his brow when amused.

"Stop screwin' up yer face that way," Bumpy would command. "Lord! Seems so the devil had stepped on yer big toe. It makes ye look like Mrs. Smelts."

"Who is Mrs. Smelts?" Bony asked.

"Well, sir, I reckon she's the humblest woman in the world. Lives in Pitcairn. She'd wilt ye down. Smelts is dead. He must 'a' died lookin' at her."

So the time went until the turkey, well browned, and baked potatoes and fried fish were on the table all smoking hot. Then Bumpy brought to the banquet a pot of delicious coffee and a jug of cider "with a little edge on it." The feast began.

Bumpy kept the boys laughing with an account of the singular adventures of Dick and himself on the road. In telling these stories he was wont to use the first person plural. Even when speaking of his own thoughts he said "we" as if out of respect for his comrade. It was different when he told of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg and of crawling into a clump of bushes with a bullet in his breast at Cold Harbor. There was generally a note of vanity in his stories. Some of them gave the impression that he was a man of amazing courage and fortitude. Then the scars!

By and by Bony had his turn. He knew all the droll sayings and misdeeds of Amity Dam. While Bumpy was filling his pipe he turned to Shad Morryson and said: "Boy, you ain't done a thing but laugh an' listen. Slip yer belt on the pulley an' keep the works a-goin'."

It was then that Shad's remarkable gift for imitation was discovered. He told a number of the stories of Phide Scott, reproducing the droll dialect so faithfully that his friends roared with laughter. They sat talking the hours away until the sun was low. Suddenly Bumpy arose and began to pick up the dishes, saying: "And there lay round upon the ground great heaps of so'gers."

Bumpy used this rhymed picture as a kind of tailpiece to every situation. There was a touch of satirical humor in it. Doubtless at the lodge and at other places where old soldiers were wont to gather he had been fed up with bloody tales of the great conflict. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Daughter of Herodias Not Mentioned by Name

Nowhere in the Bible does it say that Salome was the name of the daughter of Herodias, who, instructed by her mother, requested of Herod and received the head of John the Baptist in a charger as the reward of her dancing. The Scriptural accounts of this incident do not give the name of the daughter of Herodias, referring to her simply as the damsel. From the Jewish historian Josephus we learn that Herodias had a daughter named Salome by her first husband, who was Herod's brother Philip. This Salome first married her first cousin and step-brother, Herod Philip, tetrarch of Iturea, and afterward became the wife of Aristobulus, king of Chalcis. It is merely a conjecture that she was the damsel who asked for the head of John the Baptist. The Salome mentioned in connection with the crucifixion was an entirely different woman.—Pathfinder Magazine.

"Nobody ever see you drinkin'," said Bony. "I supposed you got drunk thinkin' o' Cy Doolittle an' the scenery."

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hope of depositors in closed state banks that they would be repaid a portion of their deposits by loans contracted with the Federal Reconstruction Finance Corporation have faded with the announcement by State Auditor Nelson that an application for a loan, made by the receiver for one closed bank has been refused. The announcement by the state auditor followed an opinion rendered by Attorney General Carlstrom that receivers for state banks might pledge the bank's assets for loans from the corporation only upon permission granted by a court.

In line with the efforts of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce to encourage residents of the state to visit beauty spots and historical points in Illinois, should come programs by cities, towns and civic organizations advocating local beautification by planting trees, shrubbery and flowers at this season of the year.

Between 90,000 and 100,000 persons will visit Chicago during the National Republican and Democratic conventions if the expectations of the Citizens' committee are fulfilled. Edward N. Hurley has made the estimate on the basis of advices from all sections of the country. The Republican meeting starts June 14 and the Democratic convention June 17.

James M. White, supervising architect for the University of Illinois, announces that plans are under consideration for the construction of a model of the university campus to be exhibited at the Century of Progress exposition at Chicago next year.

Approximately 300 delegates from all sections of the state were in attendance at the convention of the Illinois Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs held in Champaign-Urbana recently.

Townships may issue anticipation orders to pay damages incurred by property owners through location of the right of way of a state bond issue road, Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom has notified the state's attorney of Macoupin county. Request for an opinion was made because no levy was made for such warrants in certain Macoupin townships. The attorney general pointed out that anticipation tax warrants may be issued only after a levy has been made, but that the law provides for anticipatory orders, payable out of taxes for such claims.

Many matters of great importance to bank depositors, business interests and the banks themselves were discussed in the reports of the committees of the Illinois Bankers' association as they were presented to the forty-second annual convention of that organization which was held in Springfield on May 23, 24 and 25.

A gravel road from Route 2 to and throughout Giant City State park, located eight miles south of Carbondale on Route 2, is now open for traffic. The drive is a beautiful one throughout the entire loop of approximately ten miles. This newest and greatest of the state parks offers a variety of scenic and historical features; its shady nooks and leafy dells are ideal spots for picnic parties or family reunions. Visitors are urged to visit the park, but requested not to disturb trees, flowers, ferns or mosses.

Salesmen, dealers and brokers of securities who paid a state license fee last year under a registration act which later was held unconstitutional by the State Supreme court must pay another tax, and are not entitled to credit for the previous tax paid, Attorney General Carlstrom has held.

The regular array of the sixth corps area will hold a military tournament at Soldier field, Chicago, from June 24 to July 4 inclusive. To be known as the George Washington Bicentennial Military tournament, it will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington, the first commander of the United States army. Troops from all branches of the army will participate with drills and demonstrations, and it is expected that this will be one of the outstanding events of the bicentennial year in Chicago and the Middle West. All proceeds, above expenses, go to charity.

A large delegation of Illinois Masons attended the dedication of the George Washington Masonic memorial at Alexandria, Va., on May 12. G. Haven Stephens, grand master of Masons of the state of Illinois, took part in the dedicatory services and William G. Thon, chairman of the Illinois Washington bicentennial commission, was present and presented the State of Illinois.

Wind Sways Monument

The Washington monument bends slightly during storms. This is rendered perceptible by means of a copper wire 174 feet long hanging in the center of the structure and carrying a plummet suspended in a vessel of water. At noon in summer the apex of the monument is shifted by expansion of the stone a few hundredths of an inch toward the north. High winds also cause perceptible motion, depending upon the velocity. In still weather vibrations of the earth's crust are also registered by this instrument.

Valuable Desert Animal

The llama can go four or five days without water.

Tax anticipation warrants of the University of Illinois for $800,000 face value have been sold to the First Union Trust and Savings bank of Chicago. The company's bid was accepted by the governor, treasurer and auditor.

Inaugurating a Memorial day observance at Lincoln's tomb, which they plan to repeat annually, modeling it after the ceremony of the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, a group of patriotic and veterans' organizations May 30 honored the memory of Abraham Lincoln as Civil war commander in chief of the country's armed forces. Attorney General Carlstrom was the speaker at the first observance.

Illinois apple prospects are fair, but the peach outlook is very poor, according to the recent forecast compiled by Arthur P. Holt, superintendent of the marketing division of the state department of agriculture. It is estimated that the peach crop will be but one-tenth of last season's commercial production.

Doctor Cigrand, who is an authority on the lives of Washington and Lincoln and the history of the flag, was a professor of the history of medicine at the University of Illinois Medical college. He was also founder of the School of Dentistry at Northwestern university.

The state department of agriculture has issued a warning against the rapidly increasing prevalence of four obnoxious weeds, all comparatively new to Illinois and has set about to show farmers how to identify the plants and war against them. They are commonly known as "orange hawkweed," "rough bed-straw," "winter cress" and downy "brome-grass." Weed specialist in the state's seed laboratory have collected all available information about these four unwelcome visitors in Illinois, and will display mounted specimens of the weeds this season.

For every $100 which the Illinois emergency relief commission allocated for relief work up to April 30, less than 18 cents was spent by the commission in carrying out its functions, according to Edward L. Ryerson, Jr., chairman. In other words, operating expenses of the commission have been less than one five-hundredth of its allocations, it is pointed out.

Illinois will share in the savings made in bovine TB testing with the counties that employ their own veterinarians, it has been stated following a conference between Stuart E. Pierson, director of the state department of agriculture and D. W. Robinson, superintendent of animal industry. The aid offered the officials state, will pay, in part, the salaries of veterinarians now employed at the expense of 23 Illinois counties. The bovine tuberculosis law permits, but does not require counties to employ veterinarians at county expense. It also authorizes, but does not demand that the state must pay the county veterinarians' salaries.

Fuller, University of Chicago; librarian, A. S. Coggeshall, state museum, Springfield; editor, Dorothy E. Rose, state geological survey, Urbana.

A total of 1,294 building projects, involving an estimated expenditure of $1,972,240, was authorized by building permits in 45 reporting Illinois cities during the month of April, 1932. These figures reveal increases over March 1932 of 79.7 per cent in the number of building projects, and 61.7 per cent in the total proposed expenditure. Despite the increase, the total expenditure for April was 73.6 per cent below April, 1931, and is considerably below the amount reported for any April in the twelve years for which building records of the Department of Labor are available.

Biblical Perfume Recipe

The first record of the making of perfume is in Exodus, says the American Druggist. The prescription ran as follows. "Take thou also unto thee the chief spices: of flowing myrrh five hundred shekels, and of sweet cinnamon half so much, even two hundred and fifty, and of sweet calamus two hundred and fifty, and of cassia five hundred, after the shekel of the sanctuary, and of olive oil a hin; and thou shalt make it a holy anointing oil, a perfume compounded after the art of the perfumer."

HOW TO MAKE CUT IN RATION COSTS

Use Home-Grown Grains, Is Advice of Expert.

Substantial savings in the poultry ration may be made by using an abundance of home-grown grains in rations for the farm flock, according to poultry specialists in the department of poultry husbandry at the Ohio State university.

Grains and milk, they believe, constitute the simplest rations known for satisfactory results. It is best to keep two or more grains in feeders all the time and to give the birds only milk to drink. The choice of grains and the proportions that may be used can be varied according to their price and availability. If sufficient liquid milk is not available, allow the birds free access to meat scraps alone, or with dried milk in hoppers and give water to drink.

Any change in this system of feeding, the specialists say, should be made gradually. If the birds obtain water from the range or elsewhere when they are receiving liquid milk, the protein intake of the ration will be too low unless meat scrap or dried milk or both are kept available in hoppers.

Legume hay such as alfalfa, soy bean, or clover, is best available at all times if the flock does not have access to green grass or if yellow corn does not constitute 50 per cent or more of the grains fed. Birds kept in confinement are best supplied with cod liver oil. This may be fed by sprinkling one-half pint of cold liver oil per 100 birds over the scratch grain in the hoppers every other day.

Easy to Minimize Loss

From Hens Eating Eggs

Complaints of hens eating eggs dropped on the floor or in the nests of the pens are quite common. The habit usually starts from hens finding a cracked egg. Curiosity and appetite are the incentives that lead the hens to taste the contents of the egg. Being very palatable they take advantage of every such opportunity and soon look for eggs, whether broken or not. If the nests are kept dark there will be little trouble from layers of offending. If the eggs are gathered regularly from the floor, that will minimize the loss at that point. If the contents of the normal eggs are removed through one end and the shell is refilled with a mixture containing mustard, pepper, gasoline and other ingredients distasteful to hens, combined with any substance that will hold them together in a paste some may be cured of the habit if they taste the concoction.

Easy Way to Get Eggs

Otto Harz of the Greenleaf community in Washington county purchased some White Leghorn males a few days ago to use in breeding up his flock. In commenting on that transaction, Leonard P. Neff of Washington, the farm agent of Washington county, mentioned a project carried on at the Kansas experiment station at Manhattan. Mongrel hens having a trapnest record of 72 eggs a year were mated with pedigreed Leghorn males having an ancestry record of 200 eggs or more. Their daughters averaged 156 eggs, the next cross 188 eggs and the third cross 193 eggs.—Kansas Farmer.

As an aid to sanitation, clean newspapers can be spread over the litter when chicks are first placed under the hover. These papers should be changed daily for ten days.

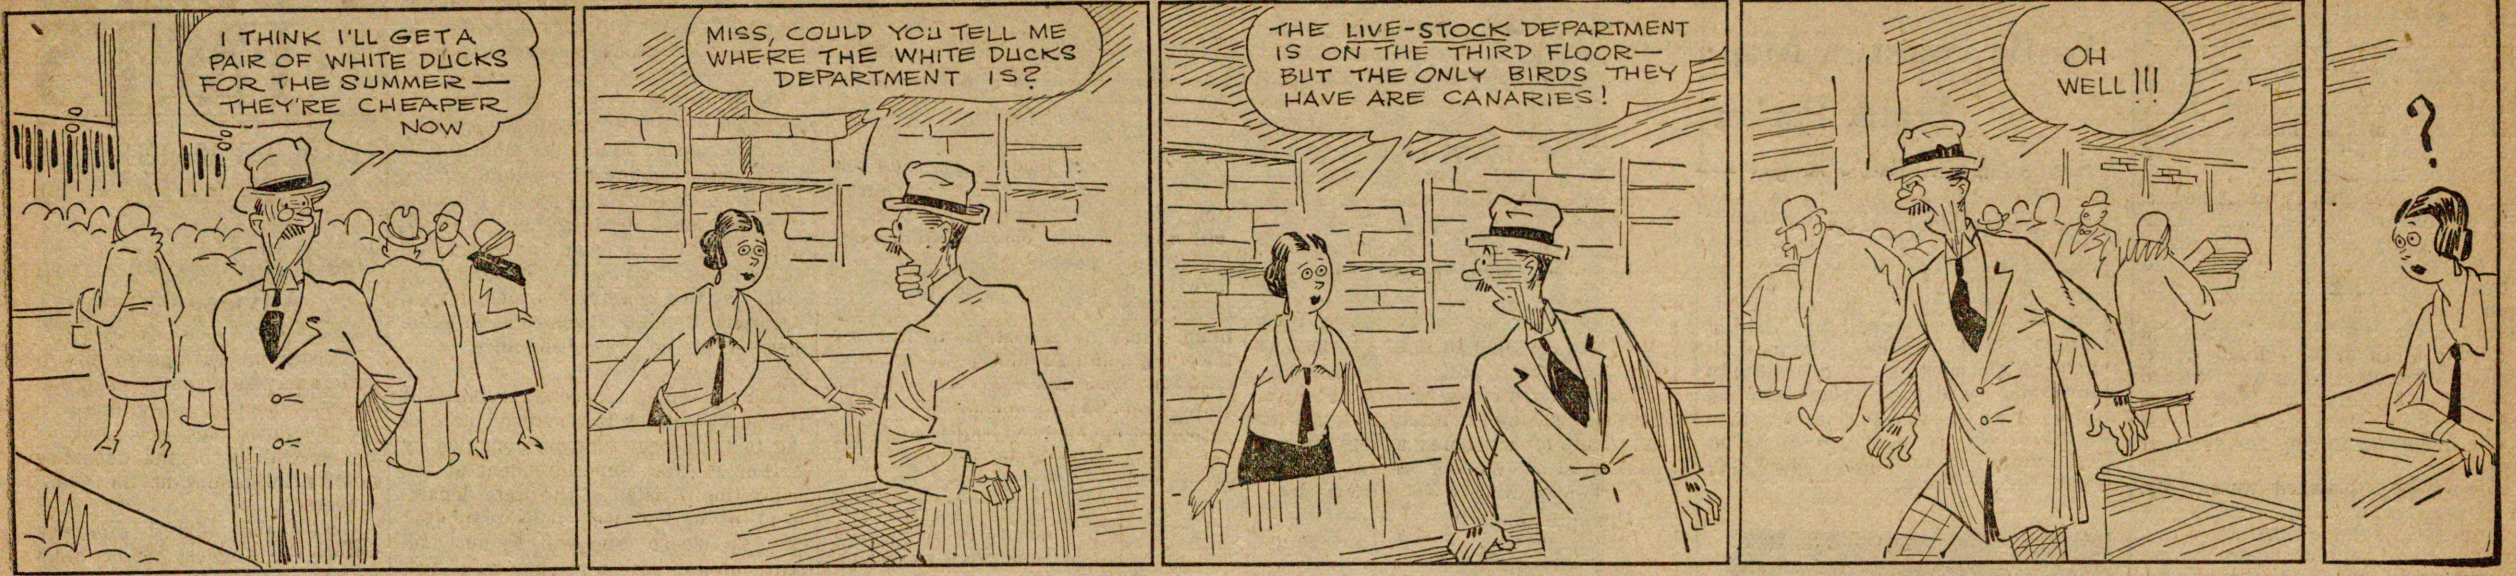

Don't think chickens can be fed at any time and thrive. Have a certain time for feeding them and feed them yourself. Chicks left to the care of others are often neglected.

Twenty-five million eggs are a lot of eggs, but that is the number used annually by one chain of 121 big city restaurants.

Painting the roosts with nicotine-sulphate just before the birds go to roost at night is recommended as a control of feather mites on poultry.

Mrs. Amelia Putnam

To Be Guest of Maj.

Frank Parker

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, the most noted woman aviatrix in the world, who recently flew the Atlantic alone, will be the guest of the United States army in Chicago on June 24 at the opening of the George Washington Bicentennial Military Tournament, it was announced by Major General Frank Parker, commanding the Sixth Corps Area. The Military Tournament will run from June 24 to July 4 as the greatest single celebration of the George Washington Bicentennial to be staged anywhere in the United States.

Major General Frank Parker

Mrs. Putnam is now in Europe where she has been the recipient of high honors as a result of her daring feat of flying across the Atlantic. She is a native of Chicago and a graduate of the Hyde Park High School in this city.

She will be received with honors rarely accorded to a civilian by the army and civic officials of Chicago will participate in the reception planned for her. Mrs. Putnam will fly to Chicago on June 24. She will be met miles out from the city by more than 100 army airplanes that will be concentrated in Chicago to stage the aviation features of the Military Tournament. With this huge escort of army planes Mrs. Putnam will enter Chicago and fly over the stadium.

Then she will remain in the air at an altitude of several hundred feet while the army planes stage spectacular maneuvers in her honor. She will then make a hurried flight to the Municipal Airport in Chicago where she will land and immediately transfer to another plane which will bring her back to the Lake Michigan front.

Leaving her plane at the foot of 8th Street, Chicago, she will be taken in an automobile to Soldier Field and in the presence of the thousands of people gathered to watch the opening of the Military Tournament will be given her official welcome to Chicago.

Mrs. Putnam will be the guest of General Parker during her stay in Chicago. She expects to return from Europe in the near future and to arrive in New York a few days before the date set for her flight to Chicago.

Mrs. Putnam became interested in aviation shortly after the world war in which she served as a nurse with the Canadian Red Cross. Since then she has established a record speed of 181.15 miles per hour for women aviators, crossed the Atlantic by plane twice, made the first solo flight for women across the United States and performed other aviation feats that have made her the leading woman flyer of the world.

Her first trip across the Atlantic by plane was made four years ago when, with a pilot and mechanic she flew from Newfoundland to Wales in 20 hours and 49 minutes.

Her daring solo flight recently also began at Newfoundland. She left Newfoundland on May 20 and fought a storm part of the way across. She was forced down in Ireland because of a leaky gas pipe, having made a record crossing time of fourteen hours and fifty-four minutes. She covered in this flight 2062 miles.

Mrs. Putnam's husband is George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher.

The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer tire life.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented construction, and the two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for tire performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD
Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and safe, quiet performance.

COMIN ROUND THE CORNER

Mr. F. W. Buxton of the Wheatland, Iowa, Gazette, who is nothing if not helpful, has filled a great national need, with the following song, which appeared recently in the Gazette and the Publisher's Auxiliary.

After waiting vainly for Rudy Vale, the Croon Prince of America, to respond to President Hoover's plea for a campaign croon song, I respectfully submit the following for the President's careful consideration with all due apology to the author of, "She'll Be Comin' Round the Mountain."

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner,

It's comin round the corner,

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

Then we'll kill the campaign rooster

When it comes.

And slay the tariff booster

So both consumer and producer

Can live just like they us'er

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

The rotten bureaus will get the axe

When it comes.

There'll be no excessive tax

To break our aching backs

And laws will not be so lax

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

We'll have peace and harmony

When it comes.

Then there'll be real democracy

Instead of this bureaucracy

That only increases aristocracy,

When it comes.

It's comin round the corner—

When it comes.

Then let's be ready for Prosperity

When it comes.

Welcome it with sincerity

Cling to it with dexterity—

And preserve it for posterity—

When it comes.

SEDAN PRAIRIE

Mokena Folk Give Sedan Prairie People Big Surprise

Well, well well, it sure makes life worth living when folk can forget their troubles of life and give to others the surprise that was given to the Sedan Prairie people at the school closing program last Monday night.

Of course we always look forward with great anticipation to the splendid program which is supervised by our capable teacher, Mr. W. R. Hollstein. We are also glad to bestow upon our graduates, the honor which they have so diligently toiled so many years to attain.

This year however, we had only three graduates, Margaret Henke, Elmer Steinborn and Earnest Harms. The program was carried out splendidly with so many, many surprises. The children carried out their parts well and much praise must be given them.

It gave us much joy to again hear two of our former graduates, Elsie Feigel and Ruth Schumacher, sing a lovely duet. Then came the big surprise, for scarcely any one knew what was in store for us.

Mr. Carlos Hall of Mokena, musical instructor of Arthur Kampe, together with his two sisters, also Arthur Kampe and Mrs. Emil Kampe, gave us a very effective number. It was rather a lovely picturesque setting, as Mr. Hall and Arthur Kampe were attired in attractive white and red suits with Spanish sashes, the Hall sisters in white and Mrs. Kampe in pink, grouped together with their guitars. Later, the Hall Trio played several pleasing selections, and judging by the public applause, it was certainly appreciated by the listeners.

We were all very grateful for their splendid treat and hope these young people will again come to our school. We also hope that other pupils, after hearing Mr. Hall, will be interested and come under the efficient instruction of Mr. Hall.

At the close of the program, Mr. Hollstein announced another big surprise in which not only the children but the entire families of the school were invited to attend the annual picnic. It was also agreed upon to go to the woods in Reimers wood on the Old Sauk Trail.

Record Race Victor Thanks Firestone

Upper left, Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., referee of the race, and Edsel Ford, pacemaker on the first lap. Lower, Fred Frame, the winner, and Jerry Hanck, riding mechanic, in the car they drove to victory.

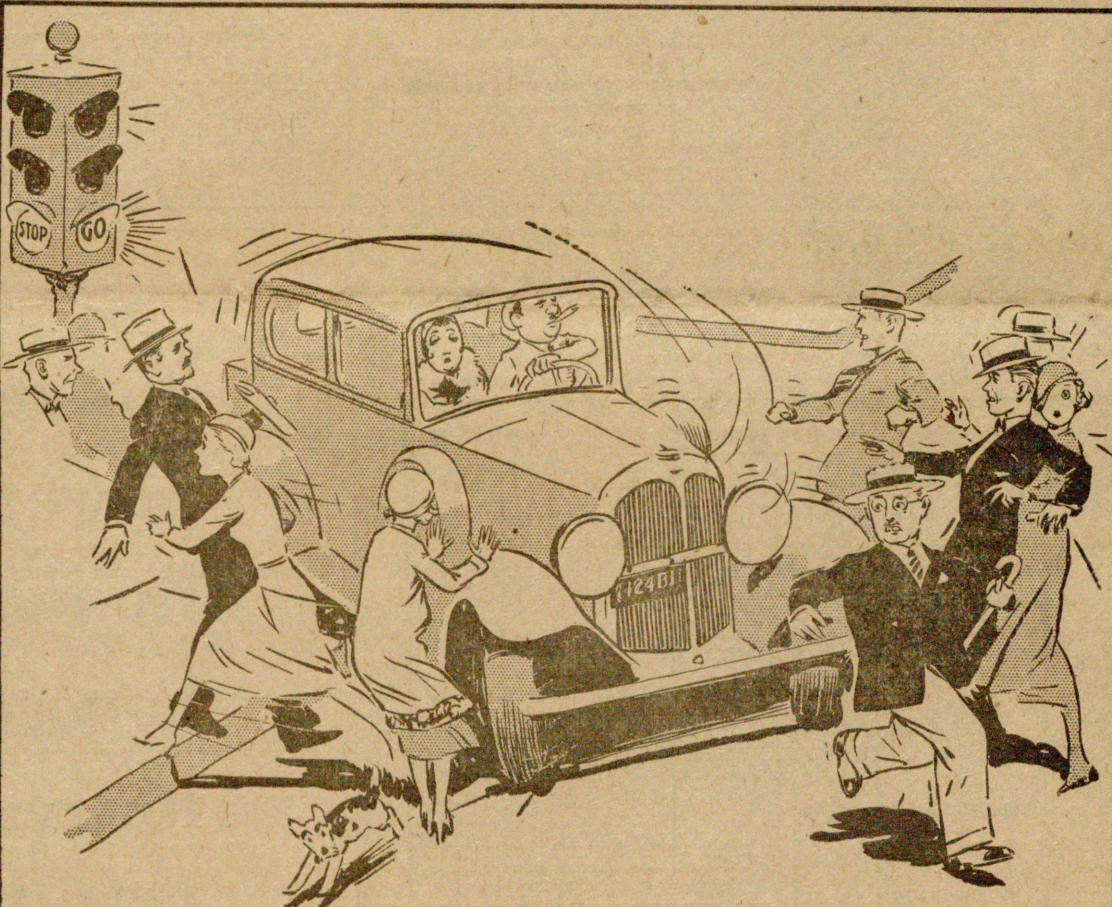

Men, automobiles and tires set amazing new records of speed and endurance in this year's 500-mile international race on the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Giving a splendid exhibition of cool and steady driving, Fred Frame, veteran of many races, won the event in record-breaking time. With an admiring throng milling around him after his sensational victory, one of the first things Frame did was to send the following telegram to Harvey S. Firestone, pioneer tire manufacturer:

"I want to congratulate you and thank you on the wonderful performance of Firestone tires which helped me win the Indianapolis 500-mile race today without tire trouble, setting a new record of more than 104 miles an hour for the 500 miles."

The race throughout was a remarkable Firestone triumph. Every car to finish was equipped with Firestone Tires. The first four broke the former record of 101.13 miles an hour made by Peter De Paolo in 1925. In all the history of the famous motor race there has never been a more severe test of tires and never a finer demonstration of their qualities than was furnished this year. It was the thirteenth consecutive victory for Firestone.

LOVE IN A COTTAGE

CYNICS are apt to call young couples who yearn for love in a cottage nuts. We know that in many cases these cynics are wrong, but still there is a connection between nuts and cottage cheeses and confectioner's sugar and such things. What sort of connection this is is revealed in the following delicious recipe which is one of the things that distinctly help to make love in a cottage delectable.

Cottage Salad

Add one-half cup chopped pecans or walnuts to two cups cottage cheese. Wash and hull one-half pint strawberries, add six marshmallows cut in pieces, and sprinkle with one-fourth cup confectioner's sugar. Let stand until the sugar is melted, then carefully fork the berries and marshmallows into the cheese so that the berries are broken but not mushy. Serve a mound of this on each slice of fruit from a No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple placed in a bed of lettuce. Pass mayonnaise.

If desired, a large service can be made of this salad by lining a large bowl with lettuce, piling the cheese combination in the center, and making an overlapping circle of the pineapple slices around the edge. A No. 2½ can of Hawaiian pineapple contains eight slices, so this recipe will serve eight people.*

BOSTON-HONOLULU CALL RECALLS MISSIONARY WORK

The first radio telephone conversation between Boston and Honolulu, a distance of nearly 6,000 miles, was between members of the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions stationed at the Board's headquarters on Beacon St., and Mr. Emil Berndt, president of the Hawaiian Evangelical Association, who was seated at a telephone in the throne room of the former royal palace in Honolulu.

The American Board sent this first message because it was missionaries of this board who, in 1819, sailed to the practically unknown Sandwich Islands and developed the then barbaric people into a Christian community, giving them an alphabet and saving valuable historical and scientific records. The throne room in Honolulu is used only on the most important occasions.

LONG DISTANCE CIRCUITS ARE EXTENDED IN SOUTH AFRICA

When Pietersmaritzburg was brought within speaking range of Capetown, South Africa, recently, long distance telephony in Africa made a notable stride. Pietersmaritzburg is 1,009 miles from Capetown, and in making the first commercial telephonic communication between the two provinces of Cape Colony and Natal, a distance of 350 miles was added to the range of long distance telephony in South Africa.

Indianapolis Winners To Be In A. A. A. Race at Roby June 19

Fred Frame winner of the 1932 Indianapolis 500 mile race and Howdy Wilcox who placed second are the first to enter the 100 mile National A. A. A. Championship Auto Race at the Roby-Chicago mile Speedway Sunday afternoon June 19.

Frame who shattered all records at the hoosier speedway is considered one of the greatest drivers of all times and those of the racing fraternity who witnessed the 500 miler say that the California veteran did the best piece of driving they have ever witnessed; for the Roby-Chicago race he will pilot a Deussenberg straight eight, two man car and will ride a mechanic.

"Howdy" Wilcox the second place winner will drive the same car he drove at Indianapolis, a Gilmore Lion Head Special, Wilcox an Indianapolis boy, a product of the dirt speedways has long been known as one of the most sensational drivers of the country and has driven over the local mile speedway as late as last fall, but the car he will pilot on the 19th is of the late Championship type, of two man body design.

The Championship event here will attract every great star in the racing game according to B. Ward Beam manager of the speedway, and he claims that he will have at least 7 of the ten money winners of the 1932 Indianapolis race, and four of the 1931 money winners, probably 3 winners of the famous International classic, and at least a dozen others which will make the entry list second only to the Indianapolis race.

All the officials of the coming Championship will be men of national reputation in the automotive industry; the officials from Washington headquarters of the A. A. A. Contest board will be on hand and it is hoped that Col. Eddie V. Rickenbacker, American world war ace will be on hand to witness the running of the first Championship event ever held other than the Indianapolis event west of Pennsylvania.

Lake Forest Flower Show June 11-12

The date of the Lake Forest Garden Club Flower Show has been especially set for June 11th and 12th so that those attending may have the privilege of seeing Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's peonies at their best. This is one of the largest and finest collections on the North Shore.

Two novel features of the show will be Outdoor Window Box Planting and Inside Arrangement of Bay Windows. The arrangement of dinner tables is, as usual, causing great interest. One of the classes is an Economy Table for six. The prize in this class will be given to the prettiest and most original table arranged at the lowest cost.

The artistic talent of the clubs is to be given special opportunity in the Breakfast Tray Class. Several artist members are going to paint portraits of themselves arrayed for their morning meal in bed, and these will be used as backgrounds for the trays. Miss Edith Cummings, Miss Eleanor Holden, Mrs. Lloyd Laflin and Mrs. Joseph Cudahy are among those competing in this class.

Supervisor Fined For Failure to Publish Financial Report

For many years various township supervisors, school treasurers and village treasurers have failed or absolutely refused to publish their financial statements as required by the state law, but within the past year cases have been filed in court against such officials and other cases are being filed this year. It is a foolhardy thing for these officials to try to evade the state law. Following is a case showing what happens to officials who neglect to publish annual financial statements in a newspaper as required by law:

"People of the State of Illinois for the use of W. H. Mohr vs. W. R. Smiddy, Supervisor of Lomax township, Henderson County, Illinois, for neglect to publish Annual Financial Statements in a newspaper. Hearing was at the court house in Oakwaka on December 12, 1931, Circuit Judge Riley Stevens, presiding, who assessed a fine of $100 and costs against the defendant. W. R. Smiddy."

GOLD RUSH ON IN NORTHERN CANADA

Use Planes to Take Prospectors Into Field.

Calgary.—A radium "rush"—and by airplane, too—is on in northern Canada. It is something new in mining adventure. The old-time gold "rush" has passed into history for the time being, at least. Discovery of $10,000,000 worth of radium has produced a novelty in mine prospecting.

But there is a gold "rush" also on in British Columbia, hundreds of men going out into the gold districts. It has been predicted that 10,000 will go out from Vancouver alone.

Two hundred grams of the precious radium—quoted now at $50,000 a gram—are already in prospect at Great Bear lake, judging from calculations made during preliminary surveys, according to Dr. A. E. Cameron, professor of mining at University of Alberta. This is one-third of that already produced in the whole world.

Syndicating operations have cornered all the territory in which the pitchblende is supposed to lie—as they have the known goldfields—so that a "rush" of prospectors generally would not net them anything. However, there has been just as much picturesque activity among a smaller number of persons in the Far North to obtain the precious ore.

There is a possibility, in view of the extreme importance of radium to the world, that the government may take over the deposits. But just now the chief problem is how to get it out—there being no railway and the trail being too long and hard for carriage otherwise than by airplane. And the capacity of airplanes to carry heavy ores is very limited.

The deposits are at La Bine Point, Great Bear lake. Hugh A. Spence, mineral technologist of the Dominion department of mines at Ottawa, has examined the deposits and pronounced them very valuable. Discovery was made in the spring of 1930 by Gilbert La Bine and considerable work has been done in opening.

At present values, ore could easily meet the cost of shipment to rail, which is $400 a ton. Improved transportation facilities, however, will have to be provided if serious production is to be obtained. A small gasoline boat drawing a ten-ton scow is the best available method of transportation across Great Bear lake (and via the Great Bear river) to Norman, on the Mackenzie river waterway, and ore has to be handled several times. Railroad is at Waterways, Alberta.

An estimate of radium in prospect, which was based on calculations by Spence, takes it for granted that 2,000 tons of pitchblende are obtainable, this running 50 per cent uranium oxide, which gives 130 milligrams of radium to a ton.

In the vicinity of Fort Norman discovery wells, considerable attraction exists for exploration. The area is a large one over which districts are scattered in which structure closures and petroliferous strata may reasonably be expected.

Planes making frequent trips have taken in prospectors to stake ground, and the two commercial plane services have reported themselves able to handle only a small part of the traffic offered to them. Ground south and east of La Bine Point has already been staked for miles. The more recent staking has been principally in the hope of finding silver.

The silver occurs as leaves and films throughout the massive pitchblende, also as a strong vein up to 30 inches wide of carbonates and wire silver in contact with the pitchblende (silver constituting 40 to 50 per cent of the vein matter) and as leaves and films on joints and cracks in a 10 to 15-foot sheared band on the footwall side of the vein. Surface ore in spots is very rich—almost pure metal. More than 1,000 claims have been staked, according to latest advices.

Sees Chance for Another Deluge

Should the average temperature of the entire world rise only a few degrees, another deluge, like that described in the Scriptures, would sweep the earth, submerging the great cities and causing a rise of more than 100 feet in the level of the oceans, according to a statement made before the American Meteorological society by Dr. William Humphreys of the United States weather bureau. This great flood of water would result from the melting of the ice caps, more than a mile thick, which surround the poles and contain more than 4,000,000 cubic miles of water. The photograph shows Doctor Humphreys indicating the area of the polar ice caps on a globe at his office in Washington.

Colton replied, "It belonged to one of Mr. Colton's wives."

Now what can one say in such a situation excepting to reaffirm the fact that the article in question certainly is a knock-out.

"What are you going to write to Carrie and Frank?" Peters asked me a few nights ago. He had evidently just received, as I had, the announcement of the marriage of two of our rather intimate acquaintances, each of whom had previously been married and whose partners we had known well. That was exactly what I had been considering in my mind, and not being able to think of anything sufficiently felicitous, I had written nothing.

Well, what should one say in such a situation? Should he let the past take care of itself and make no reference to it, or what? I am still uncertain, and that is why second marriages are sometimes an embarrassment to me.

SMOKY MOUNTAINS PLAN PASSION PLAY

Would Preserve Ancient Music and Folklore.

Boone, N. C.—Ballads, native customs, culture and folklore of the great Smoky mountains may form the basis upon which a great "Passion Play," patterned somewhat after that of Oberammergau, will be built.

The idea, conceived by Prof. I. G. Greer of the Appalachian State Teachers' college here, is as yet only an idea, but its enthusiastic reception leads the professor to hope that he may see it executed fully within the next decade.

Coming of modern days to the mountains, with good roads, accredited schools and radios, has brought fear that the old ballads handed down for generations by mountaineers might be lost. Mountain youth is singing jazz instead of the songs its father sang.

The ballads go back to early English times, no one knows how far. Generations have not only preserved, but have embellished and lengthened them. The greater part of them are sorrowful, rhythmic, mournful echoes of the sternness of the mountaineer's life, as it was that of medieval peoples.

Singers taking part would be natives, Greer said, for trained voices cannot interpret the simple songs. It is explained that ballads differ from folk songs in that they are impersonal and record the experiences of others, while the folk song records the joys of tribulations of the singer.

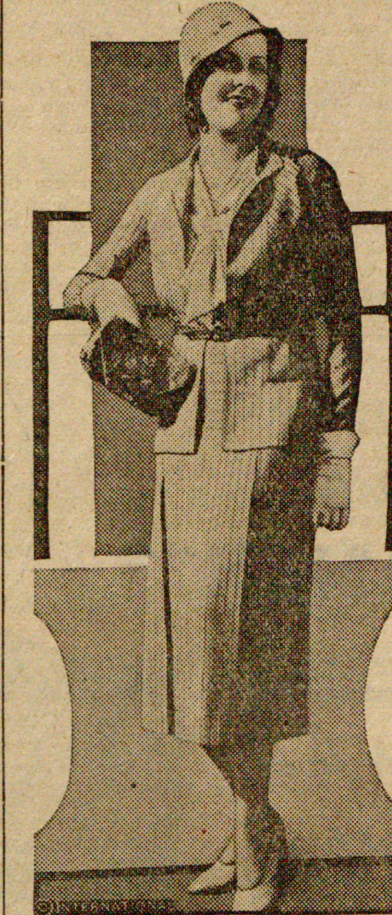

Professor Greer's idea visions a sort of amphitheater in a mountain setting where these ballads would not only be sung, but their long, droning stories would be acted out.

National park service officials have expressed favor for Greer's idea of creating a passion play of the mountains, and have promised support. Musicians in many parts of the country have expressed interest.

Other moves to preserve this quaint music have been made by Lamar Stringfield, of the University of North Carolina faculty, who is now engaged in writing an opera of the mountains; Bascombe Lamar Lunsford, an Asheville (N. C.) attorney, who annually stages mountain dances in connection with the Rhododendron festival there, and others.

CHOCOLATE JELLY

1 square sweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
1 cup cold milk
1 tablespoon granulated gelatin
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup cream
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Add chocolate to three-quarters cupful milk in double boiler and heat. Soak gelatin in remaining quarter cupful milk five minutes. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Add gelatin, sugar, and salt, and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool. Add cream and vanilla. Chill until cold and sirupy. Place in bowl of cracked ice or ice water and whip with rotary egg beater until fluffy and thick like whipped cream. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream. Serves six.

Snakes Are Missed

The importation of great numbers of reptile skins into the United States from French Indo-China is said to be responsible for an alarming increase in the rat population of the territories of the latter country from which the reptiles were taken. Snakes destroy many rats and other rodent pests, so this condition does not seem unlikely in view of the fact that 36,750 pieces of reptile skins were imported to this country from French Indo-China in the final quarter of last year alone.

The annual fire loss on farms originating from careless handling of petroleum products such as kerosene and gasoline is estimated by the Department of Agriculture to be about $7,500,000. Modern Contract Bridge

By Lelia Hattersley

No. 3.

Biddable Suits

WHEN you search your hand for an opening bid, if you hold the requisite 2½ honor-tricks, look first for a BIDDABLE SUIT, remembering always that even a four-card minor takes precedence over a no trump, provided the suit is "biddable."

Biddable suits are:
A FOUR-CARD SUIT headed by 1½ HONOR-TRICKS.

A FIVE-CARD SUIT headed by ½ HONOR-TRICKS.

A SIX-CARD SUIT headed by NO HONOR-TRICKS.

Sound minimum four-card suit bids:

A Q X X

or

A J 10 X

or

K Q 10 X

Sound minimum five-card suit bids:

K X X X X

or

Q J X X X

Sound Minimum six-card suit bid:

10 X X X X X

Opening bids of one or two, regulation suit take-outs, and forcing bids do not require any greater strength than about three trump tricks in the bid suit. But with four-card suits, the approach-forcing system does not advocate defensive or take-out bids of more than one. Only when you are making a forcing bid or take-out, or have previously bid a longer suit, is a bid of two on a four-card suit recommended. When vulnerable, four-card bids require some plus value.

In some cases even the following suits may be bid: A J X X, K Q X X, K J 10 X, or Q 10 X X X. But it must be remembered that such bids are exceptions, not advocated for ordinary hands.

It is important throughout all the contracting to keep in mind the limitations of biddable suits. Because at all times in defensive bidding, taking-out, rebidding, etc., as well as in original bids, you must be sure that any suit you mention is biddable. Sometimes in responding to an information double you are forced to mention an unbiddable suit, but no voluntary bid should be made on such a suit, except in some cases on shaded suits.

Opening the Bid, Third and Fourth Hand

In making an original bid, the position of Dealer and of Second Hand are almost identical in that each makes his declaration before his partner has had a chance to bid or pass.

After the Dealer and Second Hand have passed, Third Hand is in a different position, because his partner has shown that he cannot be counted on for honor-tricks. Therefore unless Third Hand has at least three honor-tricks he should pass; and Fourth Hand should follow the same rule.

Defensive rather than offensive strength is the thing to be considered when a player reopens the bidding and gives his opponents a second chance to enter the contracting. Should your opponents have an advanced score, even three honor-tricks would be insufficient for a third or fourth hand opening bid.

Remember that a hand is always stronger defensively when the honor-tricks are distributed rather than massed. The distribution of your honor strength and protection in major suits are always important factors to keep in mind when opening doubtful Third and Fourth Hand bids.

At the same time, do not allow yourself to be so fearful of opening the bidding that you are tempted to pass out sound minimum Fourth Hand bids which might result in securing your side a partial score or even, occasionally, a game. Your partner, although he has passed originally, may be just under his quota of honor-tricks, or may hold some very long suit, sufficiently strong for a secondary bid.

An old bridge wheeze which has cost players many points in the loss of valuable partial scores is:

"Never open fourth hand unless you can see game in your hand."

Actually to see the probability of game in your own hand you would have to have a holding of extraordinary strength; either great trump length, or at least 5½ honor tricks.

The question to ask yourself before opening a Fourth Hand bid is not, "Can I see game?" but, "Can I see enough defensive tricks to hope that, with about one trick from my partner, I can save game against any bid my opponents are apt to declare."

Another misunderstanding, which occurs among less experienced players is that the position of Third or Fourth Hand carries the same restrictions on bids following the opening declaration as it does on the original bids. Once the contracting has been opened a player's original position in regard to the dealer is an affair of practically no moment.

Lesson for June 12

JUDAH THE TRUE BROTHER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-45:15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!
PRIMARY TOPIC—Keeping a Promise.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Benjamin's Big Brother.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Boys and Girls Can Do for Their Family.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—True Brotherhood.

I. Joseph Severely Tests His Brethren (42:9-44:17).

Driven by sore need because of the famine, Joseph's brethren came to Egypt to buy food. As Joseph personally dispensed the food, he immediately recognized his brethren upon their arrival in Egypt, but they did not recognize him. In this test Joseph 1. Accused them of being spies (42:9-17). He declared that they had come to see the nakedness of the land. In spite of their protests of innocence, he cast them into prison and demanded that their younger brother be brought as a proof of the truthfulness of their word.

2. He kept Simeon as a hostage (42:18-38). Joseph declared that because he feared God he sent the rest home with provisions for their families, demanding that Benjamin be brought to him. To further impress them with his wisdom and power, Joseph ordered the money of every one to be restored in his sack. Upon the discovery of the money they exclaimed, "What hath God done to us?"

3. Benjamin's peril (44:18-34). By a clever device Joseph's cup was placed in Benjamin's sack and was used as an occasion for bringing them back on the charge of theft. Convicted now of their sins and realizing the seriousness of their situation, Judah pleaded for the release of Benjamin. Benjamin was now being held as the one supposedly guilty of theft.

II. Judah's Plea (44:18-34).

1. For the turning away of Joseph's anger (vv. 18-32). In this plea he recited the history of the family, their coming to Egypt, and appealed to Joseph on the basis of the effect upon Jacob, their father, if Benjamin were not permitted to accompany them home. In most powerful and persuasive language he set forth the love of Jacob for Benjamin, the son of his old age, and the sole survivor of his beloved wife, Rachel. His plea was as much for his father as for Benjamin.

2. That he himself might be kept in slavery instead of Benjamin (vv. 33, 34). In this he showed his true worth, that is, as being worthy of the trust reposed in him by Jacob his father.

III. Joseph Reveals His Identity (45:1-15).

After such a plea as Judah had made it is not surprising that Joseph could no longer restrain himself.

1. He declared his identity (vv. 1-3). This act on the part of Joseph troubled them. It ought to have made them glad. Under ordinary circumstances this would have been a time of exceeding joy, but their sins were in the way. This not only affords a beautiful example of forgiving love, but most beautifully illustrates Christ's dealing with his brethren, the Jews. When the seven years of famine came his brethren who had left him and sold him were compelled to come to him for aid. Joseph dealt severely with his brethren to test them and to bring them to repentance.

2. He bade his brethren come near to him (vv. 4-8). When he revealed himself to them, the remembrance of their sins pierced them through. How just it would have been now for Joseph to take vengeance upon them. Joseph's first question was about his father, showing that his desire was to put their thoughts far away from their crime. He invited them to come near unto him and assured them that God had overruled their crime for salvation. They meant it for evil, but it was part of God's plan for good. He comforted them. This is exactly what Christ will do for his brethren, the Jews. He will become reconciled unto them and become their Saviour and Benefactor. Just as all Egypt was obliged to come to Joseph for sustenance, and become the servants of Pharaoh through him, so will all the world come to Christ for his blessing and be reconciled to God through him.

3. Joseph sent his brethren away with good news (vv. 9-15). As soon as Joseph's brethren knew him and were reconciled to him they were sent with glad tidings to their father. As soon as the Jews come to know Jesus Christ as the Messiah he will send them away to the ends of the earth with the good news of his saving grace.

Stick to It

Whatever you are from nature, keep to it; never desert your own line of talent. Be what nature intended you for, and you will succeed; be anything else, and you will be ten thousand times worse than nothing!—Sydney Smith.

Human Nature

However exquisitely human nature may have been described by writers, the true practical system can be learned only in the world.—Fielding.

SEA GULLS EXPERT IN AERIAL CRAFT

Could Give Pointers to Army Aviators.

Some six or seven years ago the Vineyard Gazette published its first story of the sea gulls, which, having discovered that the hard-surfaced roads serve well as a substitute for a rock, shatter scallops and quahaugs to bits by dropping them from the air to the surface of the highway. Since that time the Gazette has carried further stories, detailing the uncanny skill of these birds, who made allowance for wind velocity with the accuracy of an expert rifleman or airplane bomber, never missing the narrow road or failing to drop the shellfish from a height sufficient to shatter the shells. All of this may be verified.

Other newspapers have made similar discoveries about gulls in various places, and it has become quite the reasonable thing for them to carry an account of the activities of these natural sky riders whenever the shellfish are easily obtainable and attract the birds. But the Gazette now presents a new angle on the Vineyard seagulls, together with the solution of a mystery that has for long been a puzzle to islanders.

For several years it has been noticed by passersby on the Edgartown-oak Bluffs road that in the vicinity of Antlers Bridge there are apt to be found the mortal remains of large rats at very frequent intervals. Where they come from, or what causes their death, has been a subject for discussion, as in many cases the carcasses are found where the wheels of passing cars could not have struck them, and moreover, they always bear the appearance of having been more or less mangled and torn. It has remained for Capt. Chester Robinson to solve the mystery, which the Gazette now publishes.

According to the captain, who is well versed in natural history, and has spent much time in observing the activities of sea birds, the ordinary sea gull is fond of rats and mice. The remains of shellfish, scattered along the road in this locality, act as bait, attracting these rodents from long distances. They hide in the beach grass when cars or pedestrians approach, but when the highway is clear they will scurper about the road, eating the fragments of scallop or quahaug that they find in the emptied shells.

At this juncture the highly efficient gulls get in their skilled and deadly work. Soaring aloft with a heavy quahaug in their beaks, they mount to an unusual height, and hovering and shifting their position, gauging the wind and drift to a nicety, they drop the shellfish with a precision that almost never fails to connect with the rodent below, knocking it unconscious or killing it outright on the spot, whereupon the gulls descend and feast on fresh meat.

The Vineyard may justly claim the first actual bomb-dropping gulls ever to be reported to date, and army aviators may pick up some valuable hints by studying these birds and their methods.—Vineyard Gazette.

Widespread Belief in

Unicorn Through Ages

From very remote antiquity down to the present time, China and Japan have preserved a belief in a powerful one-horned wild animal, in the varied form of a horse, an ass or an ox.

The encyclopedias tell us that Ctesias, a learned Greek physician and writer, who died about 300 B. C., in one of his treatises speaks of white or red wild asses of beautiful shape, with single, long white horns upon their heads, which existed in India. He goes on gravely to inform us that drinking cups made from the horn of a unicorn rendered safely innocuous any poison poured into them, a belief which persisted into and past the Middle ages.

The origin of these stories it is difficult to find. No remains of any such animal have ever been discovered, nor do writers claim to have actually seen a specimen of them. And yet the belief in their existence is so widespread in several parts of the world that it might be made to appear foolish to deny that any such creature ever existed. A glance at the heraldic presentation of a unicorn in the British royal coat-of-arms should serve to show the absurdity of attempting to identify the ancient unicorn with so ungainly a one-horned animal as the rhinoceros, as would some writers.

Here's One Honest Man

A Berlin cabinet maker's wife had nothing to offer a beggar but a pair of her husband's old shoes, which, unknown to her, contained his entire savings, 1,500 marks ($380). The beggar did not inspect them; sold them to a second-hand dealer. The dealer read the owner's story in the newspaper, turned over the shoes and the money to the police, who returned them to the right owner.

Count Keyserling is one of those humorless persons who refer to their tremendous sense of humor as ensuring their sanity in a mad world, and then make you wonder what they have done with it. "Nowadays," he said to me one day at a luncheon party, "I only laugh."—William Gerhardt in the Saturday Review.

Over-Officered

At a recent inspection before the mayor of a small New Jersey town, it developed that the village had seven police officers and three policemen on its force. The officers—the chief, the captain, the lieutenant, three sergeants and a finger-print expert—lined up with the mayor to watch the patrolman trio pass by.

SUPREME IN THEIR OWN ENVIRONMENT

Australian Natives Masters of Woodcraft.

Among the wonders of empire are living men of the Stone age whose forefathers saw the rise and decay of all bygone civilizations.

Ignorant as they seem to us, the aborigines of Australia in their own environment are as much in advance of our most brilliant scientists as our scientists are in advance of the average man. Our cleverest men would starve to death if dropped down without food, clothing, or weapons in the heart of Australia, but the Stone age men thrive and flourish in such conditions.

They live solely by hunting, their knowledge of the habits of wild things being uncanny. If they were not the world's most marvelous trackers they would have died out ages ago. They can read every scratch and mark on the ground as easily as you read this paper, and can tell whether the creature they are chasing is young or old, what it is doing, and where it is going.

They eat anything, even snakes and lizards, and once they get on its track a creature is doomed, for they never give up until they get it. Nor do they make the mistake, common to the whites, of trying to dig out of its burrow an animal that is not at home.

Their crude form of writing by burning or carving dots and lines on sticks—stick messages—enables them to send any information by runner to distant members of their tribes. But even more wonderful are their smoke messages. They seem to converse in smoke as easily as the airplane writes in smoke in our own skies.

Starting the fire by rubbing one piece of wood against another, they select their materials in the most careful manner. Familiar with the type of smoke given off by different woods, they make smoke of various densities and colors, thick clouds, light spirals, or flurries in brown, yellow, black, blue, or pink; and every change of color and form has its meaning in their age-old code.

Town That Died

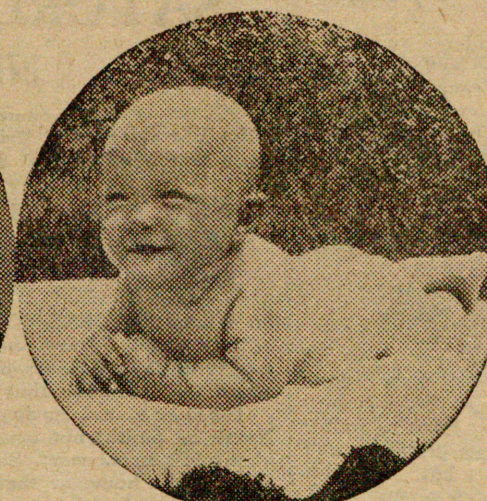

The town of Greta, Scotland, famous as a marrying place, blossomed into further prominence as a munitions center during the World war. It cost no less than $45,000,000 to build and equip, and turned out $75,000,000 of cordite during the war, but is now the most dismal spectacle imaginable. The great plain is dotted with crumbling, roofless buildings. The concert and dancing halls, the cinemas, institutes, and playing-fields—all are in ruins or weed-grown, and of the former population of 6,000 people very few are left.

Trying Hard, Though

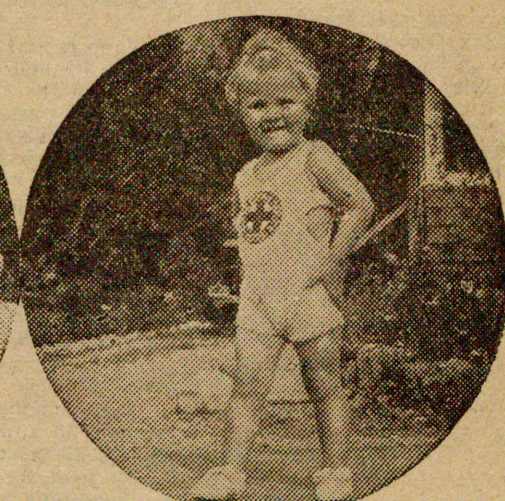

Carpenter—Well, John, have you sharpened all my tools?
Apprentice—Yes—all but the saw—
I haven't quite got all of the gaps out of it.

Pictured here is Bobbie Holcombe, 1841 Howell Mill Rd., Atlanta, Ga., riding "horse." He has always been an Eagle Brand baby, has never been sick, and at seven months weighs 21 pounds.

This 5-month-old daughter of Mrs. W. Gevekoth, 3 Prospect St., New Rochelle, N. Y., was "small and thin when born, and no formula would agree. On Eagle Brand," her mother writes, "she has gained steadily and is now the picture of health."

This husky life-saver—well-built, and strong—is Edson R. Tamblin, Jr., 150 Union St., Ridgewood, N. Y. He is an Eagle Brand baby—just two years old—and tops the scales at 32 pounds.

Judge a baby food by the babies it builds

Look at them—three of the hundreds of thousands of babies that are raised, each year, on Eagle Brand. Their mothers sent their pictures to The Borden Company—as countless mothers do each year—because they are proud of the look of these babies—eager to have us show other mothers what Eagle Brand does in building a fine physique, a happy disposition, a good foundation for health through the years.

Look at the way their bones are shaping—strong and sturdy. See how their healthy, normal growth is making them fine-looking, "well-favored."

And then consider this: In the 75 years since Gail Borden put Eagle Brand on the market, three generations—millions—have been raised on this wonderfully digestible food. No other food, except mother's milk, has such long-continued, practical evidence of its success in baby building.

Recently, in a famous baby clinic, this practical evidence was scientifically verified—in a feeding test with 50 average infants. Judged by X-ray pictures of bone structure, blood counts, weight and height records, every modern check on growth, these Eagle Brand babies proved themselves ideally nourished.

their children are running into when they use the public street for a playground. There are plenty of roomy yards for the children to play in and there is a large playground at the school equipped with slides and with swings for which $300 were collected with the idea that this would keep the youngsters off the streets.

If parents are careless regarding the safety of their children and continue to allow them to play in the streets they are entirely to blame if a child is killed or injured.

POUR CONCRETE FOR NEW HICKORY CREEK BRIDGE AT NEW LENOX

Work on the new bridge over Hickory creek is progressing nicely. Concrete is being poured for the new abutments. The new bridge will be located considerable farther east from the old bridge site in order to take the curve out of the road. The new line up the Rock Island railroad crossing will also be moved farther east. This will mean that the road will run thru the front yard of A. W. Walsh and a number of stately old shade trees will have to be cut down. Cedar street will connect with the Lincoln Highway at the south edge of Mr. Walsh's property.

The old Hickory Creek bridge which was torn out a week ago was built in 1903.

Fording of Hickory Creek while the new bridge is being installed has been greatly improved by highway commissioner Ernst Oram who has installed a number of culvert pipe in the bed of the creek and has covered the pipe with crushed stone, thus providing a safe roadway.

The contract for the paving of Cedar street from the Lincoln Highway north to Maple street was let the past week to contractor
